

ELL RESOURCES

Courtesy of Cindy Sheriff

<https://learningenglish.voanews.com/>

There are three different levels. Beginner, Intermediate and Advanced. For example, at the Intermediate level - There are current articles available under Health and Lifestyle, Science and Technology, and Arts and Culture. Each article is printed on the web page and an audio recording is available to listen to as you read along. Great opportunities for vocabulary, speaking, and grammar.

<https://www.usingenglish.com/quizzes/>

This website has a wealth of handouts for tutors. These are multiple choice exercises. On this page you select the topic you want to focus on. Once you select a specific quiz, select the tab 'printable worksheet'. Then 'print this page'. All the worksheets are available by selecting the corresponding quiz.

<https://eslflow.com/grammarlessonplans.html>

This website has hundreds of worksheets for beginner through intermediate levels. Click the down arrow next to 'Popular Resources' and 'Other Topics' on the left. This expands to include many topics to explore. There is a link for a PDF of each exercise.

Please note there are many other skill areas covered on this website.

<http://www.newsinlevels.com>

This website is good for a variety of interests and it has three levels covering vocabulary, speaking, and listening (but British accent on audios). It also has some condensed books that Both my learners really enjoyed.

www.manythings.org

This website is especially good for reading skills. Although it covers a wide range of English skills, I think the reading section is the best.

<http://www.newsinlevels.com>

Good for reading, but British accent on audios.